Sir

Local fires are for the volunteer firemen and women to act on , on behalf of the community within which they reside.

Such fires are "local" in every sense and that's what the job is and what they volunteer for. Whenever the matter becomes a "campaign fire" and they have to fall in line with others to function as they do collectively, then its should be a different story financially for those involved. My local fire chief spent every day for weeks firefighting, and being self employed, never earned a penny in the meantime. That's not right.

yours sincerely
